

2022河北高二下学期人教版高中英语月考试卷

1.

Podcasts (播客)

The B. S. Report

Designed for the sports fan with a sense of humor, The B. S. Report is hosted by the sports writer Bill Simmons. Simmons' show is in very loose and free form and it's not uncommon for him to go almost a whole show without even mentioning sports, especially when he really gets going about movies or his ongoing enthusiasm about reality television.

Wait, Wait... Don't Tell Me

One of the most popular programs on National Public Radio, Wait, Wait... Don't Tell Me is now available as a podcast. The show is a news program in the form of a game show. Each week a group of three humorists and writers join host Peter Sagal in Chicago, where they are quizzed on the week's most important and funny news stories. Listeners also get to call in to play different news related games for a prize.

The Moth

The Moth is a weekly podcast run by a nonprofit art organization. The show is made up of recordings of "true stories told before a live audience without notes". Each week, the group releases short 10-20 minute tales told by people from all walks of life. Past presenters have included writers, comedians, scientists, and even New York City police officers.

Filmspotting

Filmspotting is a weekly podcast and is a must-listen for any movie fan. The show is focused on movie reviews, but hosts Adam Kempenaar and Matty Robinson do more than just tell their listeners which new movie is worth seeing. They also discuss and examine film as an art form. The show doesn't just focus on current movies, either, as the hosts frequently discuss old films as part of theme marathons.

21. Which host can you turn to if you want to win an award?

A. Bill Simmons.

B. Peter Sagal.

C. Adam Kempenaar.

D. Matty Robinson.

22. What do The B. S. Report and Wait, Wait... Don't Tell Me have in common?

A. The content.

B. The style.

C. The theme.

D. The form.

23. What can we learn about The Moth?

A. It's an art podcast.

B. It's a daily program.