1.

My daughter's cheeks had never looked so rosy. Never before had she tried out a sauna (桑拿). In Britain, anyone under six years old isn't encouraged to do such things. In Finland, there's one sauna for every three people.

We had never thought about coming to Finland before, and hadn't actually heard of Tampere, the country's third largest city. It's actually less than two and a half hours away by plane, and has a population of 200,000. The Finns are now advertising Tampere as the perfect place for an all-year round holiday. We arrived to be greeted by a beautiful blanket of snow on the ground, but in the summer it's hot, very green and perfect for outdoor trips.

The city is small and pretty, with some beautiful churches, good museums and various kinds of souvenir shops. Shopping centers include a charming Christmas market and nearby in Lempäala, the Ideapark, with more than 100 stores and a great children's activity center where you can leave the kids and shop until you are content.

There is also a fine choice of restaurants and the woods are just a short drive away. There are also 3,000 lakes in the Tampere, with 200 of them inside the city limits. This makes for some truly amazing scenery, which may even be better viewed in summer: the December days are short and not particularly bright.

Our trip was packed with activities which would attract families---and that included two trips to a sauna which was in the middle of the woods, at Villa Amanda, around an hour away from the city center. It is a beautiful, traditional Finnish house, located on a lake which was half-iced over when we arrived---and easily suitable for a couple of families to rent. We drank wine and admired the views before trying out the villa's personal sauna, which my daughter enjoyed so much that she had to be dragged away from.
