1. _____

Keving Rogers used to be my boss. At that time he always told us to sell more. As soon as I could, I left his shop and got a new job in another place. The last time I saw Rogers was more than ten years ago. At least that's what I thought. But now I am not so sure.

I was on my way to my office in the centre of town. There is a small park nearby, which I sometimes walk through after lunch. The park was almost empty except for a shabby-looking man on one of those benches. The man looked about fifty years old and was wearing an old gray coat. It was cold and windy, and he was trembling.

"It's a long time since I had a meal. Can you help me?" he said. There was something about his voice that sounded familiar. I gave him a few pennies. As he went past me I looked at his face closely. I wondered where I had seen him before. Then it suddenly came to me. Could it possibly be…? No! Impossible, I thought. I watched him walking away. He was the same height as Rogers but looked a lot thinner than I remembered.

Yesterday I ran into someone who had worked for Rogers at the same time as I did, and had stayed on longer. I started telling him about the man I had seen in the park."For a moment I thought it was our old boss. But it couldn't have been. Rogers must be the head of a company now."I said.

My ex-workmate shook his head,"I thought you knew." "Knew? Knew what? What are you talking about?"

"Rogers was sent to prison six years ago. He's probably been out by now. For all I know he is sleeping on park benches and begging money from passers-by."

1. Where did the writer last meet Rogers?

　A. In a small park. 　　　　B. In a restaurant.

　C. In the centre of town. 　　　D. In his office.

2. Which of the following happened first?

　A. Rogers was sent to prison.

B. The writer got a job in another place.

　C. The writer saw Rogers ten years ago.

　D. The ex-workmate left Rogers' company.

3. The story doesn't mention anything about_____.

　A. what happened to Rogers six years ago