Just Twenty Hours

It was freshman year of college. In world history class, my professor just dropped a bombshell. 30% of our final 1 would be based on an assignment that was going to take at least twenty hours to complete. The 2? Community service. The professor also said that what could happen in those twenty hours might surprise us.

Some students in my class 3. I wasn't particularly annoyed by the assignment, 4 I was trying to figure out how I would find the time. I was going to school only part-time because I was working full-time to pay for college. I 5 shrugged (耸肩) my shoulders and thought "I'm just going to have to make it work."

After doing some research, I found an after-school tutoring program for kids in a former elementary school. I finished my 6, and a week later got a phone call saying that I had been 7 with a fourth-grade boy named Steven.

He was small 8 his age, wore glasses and was a Harry Potter fan. He was a little 9 for the first few weeks, but it was obvious he was a bright boy. He didn't need a 10 as much as he needed a friend; it seemed that his classmates mostly ignored him.

We 11 twice a week for two hours, so it only took me five weeks to complete the 12 hours for my class. When I started, I only 13 to complete the required hours for my assignment. But when the hours were done, I realized how small a 14 it had been for me to tutor Steven. I still had enough time to do my schoolwork and my full-time job. But most importantly, I liked Steven. And I could tell that he had already grown 15 to me.

As the end of the school year approached, Steven started to get a little 16. I asked him why. He said, "Because when the school year is over, I won't see you anymore." I then realized that he had become so much more than just a kid I spent time with to complete a class requirement. He 17 me of my own little brother, whom I didn't see enough. It was time to 18 that.

I started going on weekly 19 with my brother, watching movies or having dinners... And sure enough, in less than a year we became much more than just brothers. We are best friends now. My professor was 20: a lot can happen in just twenty hours.
