1.

Two girls had been best friends since their childhood. When they were small kids, they used to go to school together, play together and sometimes even stay at each others places. I he best friends graduated from school and went to the same college.

After some days, one of the friends found the other behaving in a very strange manner. She would remain withdrawn, sleep too much and turn rude very often. At first, the other friend thought it was just studies that were getting lo her. However, with time, she became even moodier and more frustrated. Finally, her friend couldn't lake it any longer and asked her to tell the truth. She burst into tears and said that had suffered from depression. Meanwhile her parents had divorced.

Shocked by her story, the other friend comforted her. She then thought of a way to help her. She contacted a famous expert who was good at curing depression and told him all her friend's problems. The expert offered to help and said the whole matter would be kept under wraps in order to protect the friend's self-respect.

The girl was then advised by her friend to go to meet the expert. She was given effective treatments medication to talking therapies. All the while, her friend never left her side and always her. At the same time, her parents, both moved by the friend's behavior, often went to accompany their daughter. Finally, the girl recovered from her depression.

Then they graduated and the friendship only grew stronger. They both went on to become successful professionals. They lived happily ever after, as close friends.
