There are large deserts (沙漠) in some parts of the world. There are no trees or no water there. People must take food and water with them when they cross the desert. The only animal that can walk through the desert is the camel. Camels can go without food or water for a long time and they can carry heavy things. People call a camel “the ship of the desert”. A camel has one or two humps (驼峰). Its humps can hold fat (脂肪), and its stomach holds water in some deep pockets (囊). Each pocket has a mouth. And each mouth is closed, so the food does not mix (混合) with the water. The camels can get water from the pockets. They usually eat grass as food.
